City okays pact for waste disposal

Guthrie City Commissioners Monday night unanimously approved a comprehensive plan for the city's solid waste collection system.

The plan, which was developed over the past year, will provide for the purchase of a new transfer station and the installation of new collection routes.

The city has already received bids for the construction of the new transfer station, and it is expected that the project will be completed within six months.

Under the terms of the agreement, the city will pay for the construction of the new transfer station and the installation of the new collection routes.

The plan also includes provisions for the future expansion of the collection system, as the city's population continues to grow.

City officials believe that the new system will provide a more efficient and effective way of managing the city's waste, and they are confident that it will be well received by the community.

The agreement was signed by Mayor John Smith and the city manager, and it is now in effect.

Workman’s comp solution not in sight

Compromise on comp harder than it sounds

By LOUISE WITT

The妥协的工人的补偿问题

Now that the state of California has finally issued a proposed plan for workers’ compensation reform, it’s time to consider what the new law might mean for businesses in the state.

The current system, which has been in place since 1940, is widely considered to be inefficient and unfair. The proposed changes are designed to address these issues and make the system more fair and efficient.

The proposed changes include increasing the amount of money available for workers’ compensation claims, making it easier for workers to receive benefits, and providing more support for injured workers.

While some businesses may be concerned about the cost of these changes, others see the potential benefits. By improving the system, the state could attract more businesses to California and create a more competitive business environment.

It’s important to note that the proposed plan is not final and there is still time forinput from the public. The public is encouraged to provide feedback on the proposed changes and to urge their representatives to support the reform efforts.

Overall, the proposed workers’ compensation reform plan in California is a positive development that could benefit both businesses and workers.

Avoid black walnut shavings in horse bedding

BY MARK GUERRINDelaware State University

Black walnut is commonly referred to as "black walnut," but it is not black in color. Its nuts can be a valuable resource in horse farming, as they are rich in proteins and minerals. However, black walnut is not suitable for horse bedding. It is best to avoid using black walnut as bedding material for horses as it can cause respiratory problems.
