Earnest, Scared, Stupid
Johnson not telling whole truth about AIDS prevention

Right man, wrong message

As a hotelier, along the Mississippi River, I took a special interest in the time when the first reports of AIDS appeared in the media. There was no understanding like there is today for this new phenomenon. I remember as a youth being more concerned about polio than any other disease. The polio virus could be transmitted only through physical contact with the patient. It was impossible to contract it by breathing the same air. Even the concept of "germs" was not widely accepted at that time.

The media today seems to be more concerned about other health issues, such as diabetes, high blood pressure, and obesity. The attention being given to these issues may be a result of the more advanced medical technology available today. It has enabled doctors to detect these problems earlier and provide more effective treatment.

However, I think it is important for everyone to be aware of the potential dangers of AIDS. The media has a responsibility to provide accurate information about this disease, including its causes, symptoms, and methods of prevention. The public needs to be educated about the risks associated with AIDS and the importance of taking precautions to avoid exposure.

Governor denies plans for higher office

Observers insist Richards will run for vice president

The announcement last week by Governor Tom Richards that he is not planning to run for the U.S. Senate was greeted with mixed reactions by political observers. Some believe that Richards is not ready to leave his current position as governor, while others think that he may be试探ing the political waters to see if he is a viable candidate for higher office.

Some believe that Richards is not ready to leave his current position as governor, while others think that he may be试探ing the political waters to see if he is a viable candidate for higher office. Richards has been a strong advocate for education reform and has been a vocal critic of the current administration's policies. He has also been a strong supporter of the state's economic development initiatives.

If Richards does decide to run for a higher office, it is likely that he will face a tough campaign. The state's political landscape is highly competitive, and Richards would need to prove that he is a viable candidate in order to win the nomination.
