HEARING THE HEALTH CARE PROBLEMS OF EAST TEXAS

Last month, in a speech before the American Heart Association in Beaumont, I expressed concern about the shortage of primary care physicians in East Texas, a problem that is growing worse due to the exodus of doctors from rural areas.

The issue is not only a matter of personal health care, but also one of economic development, as many of these physicians are trained at the state's medical schools and hospitals, yet choose not to practice in the regions they are trained in.

In response, the Department of Health and Human Services has announced a new initiative to encourage medical schools to train more doctors in rural areas, and to provide incentives for physicians to practice in underserved communities.

Justice deserves backbone

In The Panola Watchman, April 11, 1992

When the Constitution was drafted, it was with the goal of creating a government that would be strong enough to protect the rights of individuals and the freedom of citizens. This principle is embodied in the Bill of Rights, which guarantees the fundamental freedoms of speech, press, religion, and assembly.

However, in recent years, these freedoms have come under attack, with the government using its power to censor viewpoints it disagrees with, and to limit the ability of the press to report on important issues.

This is not the United States of America we fought for, and it is our duty to stand up against this tyranny and defend our precious freedoms.

Succession laws provided

In The Panola Watchman, April 11, 1992

Succession laws are crucial for ensuring that property is passed on to the rightful heirs in a fair and efficient manner. These laws vary by state, and can be quite complex, with different rules for different types of property and situations.

It is important for everyone to understand the succession laws in their state, as failure to do so could result in disputes and legal battles, as well as financial losses.

Public school fines still being reformed

In The Panola Watchman, April 11, 1992

Public school funding has been a contentious issue for many years, with many states struggling to find adequate funding for their schools. In 1992, the court ruled that the state had not provided sufficient funding for public schools, and ordered the state to increase its funding.

This decision was not well-received by some in the legislature, who feared it would lead to increased taxes and a decrease in funding for other programs. However, the court's decision was upheld by the Texas Supreme Court, and the state was ordered to increase its funding for public schools.

Federal drug, crime grant made

The state of Texas has been given a $9.5 million grant by the U.S. Department of Justice to combat drug and violent crime. A majority of the funds will go to the Panola County Sheriff’s Department to purchase new equipment and train officers in the use of the new technology.

The grant is part of a national program aimed at reducing drug and violent crime in the U.S. The funds will be used to purchase new firearms, vehicles, and other equipment to help officers on the ground. The department will also have access to new training programs to help officers stay up-to-date on the latest techniques for combatting crime.

The grant is intended to help the Panola County Sheriff’s Department improve its ability to combat drug and violent crime. The department has seen an increase in both drug and violent crime in recent years, and the grant will help it to be better prepared to address these issues.

The grant is part of a larger effort by the U.S. government to combat drug and violent crime. The Trump administration has made fighting crime a top priority, and the grant is one of many steps being taken to improve public safety.

Key to understanding mysterious 'kiddle tax'

You may still be feeling the effects of the recent 'kiddle tax' increase. The tax, which was implemented to address the issue of online shopping, has caused quite a stir. Many consumers are questioning whether the tax is justified and if it will lead to higher prices online.

The tax was introduced to combat the growing trend of online shopping, which has led to a significant decrease in brick-and-mortar retail sales. Proponents of the tax argue that it will level the playing field for online and offline retailers, ensuring that both groups pay their fair share of taxes.

However, opponents of the tax argue that it will disproportionately affect low-income families who are more likely to shop online. They also believe that it will lead to higher prices for consumers, especially for those who rely on online shopping for their purchases.

Despite the debate, the tax is now in effect, and retailers are required to collect the tax on behalf of the government. It remains to be seen how the tax will affect consumers and the retail industry as a whole.
